This program is designed to help high-school teachers prepare for the new Tennessee Social Studies Standards by focusing on the use of primary and secondary sources in the classroom. Full-time high school Social Studies teachers and principals are encouraged to apply. Participants will receive materials and stipends.

Based on what they teach, participants will choose one of the following tracks:

Ancient History	U.S. History
World History	Geography (U.S. and World)
Psychology	Criminal Justice / Contemporary Issues

This program has an online component for monthly online units and a Summer Institute in July 2018 on the LMU Harrogate campus. Participants will develop a new unit based on skills and ideas learned in the program and have a classroom observation of a lesson from this new unit in November or December 2018.

Focus Groups – We Want Your Feedback and Input

We want your feedback and input into the content topics for the program. If you are interested in applying for this program, please attend one of the Focus Groups listed in the dates on the right and tell us what topics and themes you would like to see in the online portal and Summer Institute. Participants will receive a stipend for participating in one Focus Group. Please Note: Involvement in a Focus Group does not automatically mean acceptance into the program.
